PEOPLE'S LEAGUE OF ALBERTA MEETS IN MARCH

Definite policy and future program of the organization is expected to emanate from the first meeting of the 40 members comprising the temporary provincial executive of the People's League of Alberta.

Notices stating the meeting will be held at the Palliser Hotel, Calgary, March 4 and 5 were mailed to executive members and officers of the League's many branches during the week-end.

Though it has been and still remains definitely non-partisan and non-political the executive meeting next month is expected to take the first steps subsequent to preliminary organization of a movement concerned primarily on promotion of sound, business government.

First business of the executive body will be to consider matters of policy resulting from recommendations of committees working for some months in both northern and southern sections of the province.

Once the policy and tentative program is decided, constituency associations will be expected to fully consider the recommendations adopted prior to calling a general provincial convention, representative of the entire membership, later in the year.

"I have confidence that there are enough men and women in Alberta who are big enough to forget party politics and close their ranks to fight the common foe."

Such was one of the observations by Dr. J. S. McEachern, veteran southern Alberta surgeon and physical and a prominent member of the Calgary branch of the People's League of Alberta, when the organization went on the air last week with two of a series of educational broadcasts.

Congratulatory messages, phone calls and letters followed Dr. McEachern's two addresses, also contributions from several points in the province to be used in furthering the work of the League.

So widespread, in fact, was the interest in the broadcasts, subject that H. C. Lewis, organizing secretary, announces the addresses have been printed and will be mailed to all interested parties. Requests for copies or other information should be sent to 828-A Eighth Avenue West, Calgary.

Though a large part of Dr. McEachern's addresses dealt directly with conditions in Alberta under the Abernethy regime, he found time to explain some of the reasons and objectives concerning the League. "The People's League," he stated, "invites all honest men and women who desire to preserve our cultural heritage to stand shoulder to shoulder, side by side on common ground and fight its enemies."

"The People's League has been charged with being the Conservative party in disguise, the Liberal party in disguise, the United Farmers in disguise. The members of the People's League include those who have been staunch supporters of each of these parties, and who will in a federal election again support their party. They have decided that in provincial government there is no legitimate field for party politics."

"It includes in its membership those who have never given allegiance to any party. But it also has in increasing numbers honest men and women who once voted for the Social Credit party. They realize even as you and I, that they have been the victims of a cruel, heartless hoax perpetrated upon a suffering and trustful people in the name of religion."

The question concerning free access to Alberta's courts of justice and constitutional angle of several pieces of legislation placed on the statute books will be dealt with Tuesday and Friday evenings, February 23 and 26, respectively.

Recognized People's League speakers will review the two subjects in broadcasts to be carried through Calgary radio stations. The two inaugural speeches of the League's broadcast program were given by Dr. J. S. McEachern and will within a few days be re-broadcast by transcription over Edmonton and Lethbridge stations.

FAME OF LOCAL LIBRARY REACHES ACROSS CANADA

The fame of the Gleichen library and the method in which it is operated has reached far over Canada. This last week the librarian has received a letter from Magrath offering to sell an entire private circulating library at a low price. In addition a letter was received from a Montreal address in the following words:

"A Montreal paper reports that the people of Gleichen are voracious readers. In case they have any taste for such 'dry' subjects, I am sending you a few of the sort I mostly read. If this sort is of interest to any considerable proportion of them, I might be able to send a few more later on, when I have accumulated some, say in another year or so."

A package of books containing the following titles was received on Monday, February 15, and the library committee wish to acknowledge the same.

Modern Economics
"Waste." A fascinating study of achievements of science in America, by David Cushman Coyle.
"This Way Out." A program of economic reorganization by Henry P. Fairchild.

Industry for Peace, by Gen. H. O. "Jimmie" Campbell, Canada's Problem. A study of the topic sponsored by the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, by Gilman and Sinclair.

"Work for Brains, Hands and Capital." A pamphlet, by Leo Goldberg.
"The Right to Work." A pamphlet dealing with the causes of the depression, by J. C. Wilson.

Reprints
"Across the Plain." A Stevenson classic, by R. L. Stevenson.
"Progressive Revelation," by V. Phillips.

Sociology
"The Road to Buenos Ayers," by A. Londres.

Drama
"Ulysses," by Stephen Phillips.

"The Giant." A brilliant of L. Hamilton in fiction form, by B. Hamilton. There are at present about twenty books awaiting to be catalogued and placed on the shelves, some new and some old favorites. The two members of the committee are both busy as yet if a volunteer were available the library could be opened on Tuesday evenings as well as on Friday from 1:30 to 6 p.m.

They have over 300 active branches, membership in excess of 50,000, an "surface hardly scratched," according to the latest check-up. Commenced in October the People's League of Alberta has not yet passed from the infant, organization stage. But, officers state, in that brief period committees have been busy with a tentative program, a provincial executive, a provincial temporary service, dates for a full meeting of that executive arranged, and plans well in hand for presently calling a general convention representative of the entire membership.

Following the initial broadcasts sponsored by the People's League of Alberta, contributions supporting the movement were received from Raymond, Twin Butte, Slavery, Strathmore, Coalville, Red Deer, and Calgary. The Twin Butte donation came from an American citizen—a lady who, while she has not a vote in Alberta, "certainly was very anxious to help all she could."

The policy committee of the Calgary branch meets weekly to consider the many suggestions sent in from all parts of the south. The same method of being used by other large branches throughout the province. The view of the League is that the day has passed when political party platforms will satisfy the people.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By H. G. L. Strange, Director of "Crop Testing Plant."

An international economic battle for wheat markets will soon, perhaps soon—take place.

The contestants will undoubtedly be Canada, the Argentine, Russia, the Danubian countries and Australia. Which exporting country will be able to increase its wheat acreage? Which will be forced to decrease acreage? And which will be able to hold the acreage they now have?

The country that can produce quality at the lowest cost will win; others will lose.

The harsh truth is that it is much more necessary for Canada to keep her present acreage in wheat than it is for any of the other countries. The Argentine has corn, flaxseed and cattle as substitute Australia has cotton and wool. The Danubian countries have corn, pork and so-bean. Russia has a large population feeding more foodstuffs. Canada's one has no substitutable product for export which she can grow on a substantial part of her twenty four million acres now in wheat.

Western Canada, therefore, somewhat must improve the quality of her wheat, and bring down the cost of production. Can she do this? Yes! for one believes she can provide the Dominion Government will assist, the wheat, even more than it is now doing, along sound, constructive lines.

Following factors have tended to raise price: German food scarcity becomes more evident as purchases made of Czechoslovakian, Indian and Australian wheat, also Argentine wheat and corn. Further large quantities of wheat probably needed. Further dust storms with little precipitation in U. S. southwest. West coast Mexican vegetables damaged by frost.

Following factors have tended to lower price: Further heavy general rains benefit Indian wheat and linseed. On passage wheat stocks increase. Officially decided not to raise guaranteed price of wheat in France. Fear and apple production in Argentina increasing. Irish potato increases home-grown wheat required in milling.

turn trip a blizzard set in so dense that they saw little of Manitowish and Saskatchewan. Of this Mr. Ramsay tells a story. As the train crossed into Alberta the sun shone bright and a fellow traveller rose from his seat and with a courteous bow said in a loud voice: "Take off your hats to golden Alberta."

J. L. McCrimmon and Bob Whitlock tailors have dissolved partnership. Mac is moving away and Bob will run the business.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Bartsch were Calgary visitors last week.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Collins left for a visit to friends in Colorado and Texas.

Mrs. C. J. Bay has joined her husband in Travers, where he has opened a hardware store and will reside in future.

Monday evening over forty guests attended the Oddfellows social evening. The evening was passed playing cards, and a short musical program. Mrs. Bringer was awarded a beautiful set of six prizes; guests first C. Roushka a pen knife; while Mr. Norman Reidell carried off the only other prize.

Last Saturday evening Mrs. C. A. Millie entertained a number of ladies at a garden party. After a pleasant game, rifle practice was indulged in, with the result that Mrs. Young shot the most hits and added 84 to the red cross fund.

HOCKEY

The best exhibition of hockey seen here this winter was played Monday evening when Strathmore and the Gunners met in the first game of a four game series. Strathmore won by a score of 2-1. On the night's play Strathmore had the most breaks but were unable to beat Wilson. Only a couple of times was the Strathmore net in danger, their defence being almost perfect and were never caught napping. Strathmore got three penalties but the Gunners were unable to take advantage of the situation. When Gibson was penalized for the Gunners, a couple of seconds before he was due to return, Strathmore made their first counter by Charlie Groux who slammed in the rubber in a scramble at the side of the net. No score were made in the middle of the game. Collinson uncocked a counter for Strathmore early in the third, Gibson for Gleichen followed suit in a wild spurt at the goal mouth.

The first period saw both teams playing cautiously, waiting for a break. Collinson scored when Gibson was penalized for tripping. Checking was close, Gleichen could not get near the Strathmore net owing to the excellent defence. Gleichen shot from a distance repeatedly trying to get a rebound. Wilson for the Gunners was called upon to make several saves. The pace was fast and the ice in marvellous condition.

Strathmore got two penalties in the second and Gleichen put on the pressure but the visitors out smarted them. Once Strathmore got through and had a wide open net but luck was against them, missing the net by feet. Gleichen put on several power plays and succeeded in keeping the puck inside Strathmore's blue line for a second at a time until somebody shot the puck the length of the ice. Strathmore at times got inside the Gunner blue line and made things interesting.

Early in the third Strathmore secured a two goal lead when Collinson batted home a rebound. Gibson's counter for the Gunners put heart in fans and players alike. Even when Maynard of the Gunners was penalized Strathmore took no chances and played solid defence. Gunners' more pressure, kept it up and dominated the play for the last half of the period. Strathmore at times made a rally up the ice but hurried back to protect their goal margin. The Red Wings seemed to be weary, not so the local boys, in fact never before this winter have they appeared to be in such fine condition.

Tonight the final game will be played in Strathmore.

The Brooks hockey team, accompanied by a large number of supporters played here Friday evening the second round of home and home games. Brooks and Gleichen won 6-3 or 9-5 for the round. Conditions for good hockey were far from ideal owing to snow falling at the time which interfered with the puck. The Brooks club is a bunch of highly enthusiastic players and gave a good exhibition, but the Gunners were a little too fast for them.

Brooks almost scored twice in the first when they had nobody to shut first when they had only the goalie to beat. Gleichen scored twice; first by E. Lester from B. Brown; second by Camp Brown when he beat the defence. Taylor got through but failed to beat the goalie. Gleichen bagged three goals in a row in the second, while Brooks made one, Gunner goals: C. Brown from Taylor; Gibson; E. Lester in a wild scramble in which the goalie stepped 4 shots in rapid succession. Lane scored for Brooks. In the third Brooks made two goals. Lane bulging the net each time. For Gleichen B. Brown scored from E. Lester's pass.

The Pee Wees are now lined up for their championship series. The Canadians (Old Sun) eliminated the Leafs and the Americans the Red Wings. The Canadians now meet in the best two out three games, the first game will likely be played tonight. The Canadians and Leafs played their final game Saturday morning. At the end of second period the Leafs were three goals down but by hard work managed to score two goals in the third frame, but try as they would were unable to put in a tying bagger before the final bell.

He broke off abruptly. They had both become conscious of Michael's eyes following them. Michael's eyes held a gleam of jealousy as he viewed this intimate little scene between his wife and the man who once had been reported to be her lover.

They were back in the privacy of their own apartment, however, before Michael said a word. Then he burst out:

"I'm sorry we had to run into Marlowe tonight, Starr. I intended for you never to see him again."

Starr's face was strained. She had known subconsciously that it would be like this. All through their honeymoon in the country they had not mentioned Lance's name at all, as though by common consent. Michael had asked her nothing about the man. But she could not forget—once, in that despairing mood, she had tacitly admitted to Michael that she had taken Lance's name at all, as though by common consent. Michael had asked her nothing about the man. But she could not forget—once, in that despairing mood, she had tacitly admitted to Michael that she had taken Lance's name at all, as though by common consent.

And now, because of Lance, after their long days of peace, they were in the midst of conflict again, tortured with memories which refused to be lured down.

It all was so plain to Starr. . . . Gossip linking her name with Lance's; her own voice crying out to Michael on that crazy night, telling him that she had been Lance's mistress, trying to make him hate her.

It was more than Starr could bear. She turned to her husband swiftly, pleadingly. Her voice raced.

"Michael, I've wanted to explain to you so many times, only somehow I couldn't. There has never been anything between Lance and me; never! I lied to you. All of that awful time I was living it! Michael, you do believe me, don't you? You must believe me!"

Michael, looking down on her said: "Of course I do," pressing his small, cold hands very tightly in his big ones. "You're my wife, and I love you."

But there was a strange edge to his voice which chilled her, in spite of his words.

CHAPTER XVII.

Busy-days again. Except for that slight undercurrent of an imperfect understanding which Starr felt as if she were a dining room for Michael's moods, happy days. So much to be done. And, as always at such times, little chance to think.

Michael threw himself into business with a will, making up for lost time. He left it to Starr to bunk out their new home. She had about come to the determination that they should not live in an apartment house at all, but should take one of those attractive houses out in Forest Hills. So much more like a home, with an upstairs and down, your own lawn, and a lovely vista view that would be a purple cloud in the summer time.

Michael made a little objection. It was so far away from business, he said. But with a wifely concern for his health, Starr insisted that the drive into town each morning would be just the thing he needed. Perhaps he would not get any fresh air otherwise.

So it went, with most of their discussions at breakfast, at the luncheon downtown which Starr sometimes took with her husband, and during the placid evenings they spent together in the Egyptian living room with the Del-el-Bahari fresco. Life was perfect again—almost.

Then calamity. It was on a December morning not far from Christmas time when Starr received the first of the threatening letters.

She was seated across the breakfast table from Michael in the little alcove overlooking the shining East River when Sapphira came in with the morning mail. She handed it to Michael, who ran his eye through the letters and handed over an envelope addressed to Starr. It was addressed in a rough, unformed hand. Not to Mrs. Michael Fairbourne, but simply to Starr Ellison.

Michael laughed queerly as he glanced up at her, handing her the letter.

"I thought everybody knew that we were married. Better advise your friends, Starr."

That was ridiculous. Actually she had a friend in the world, now that she had cut herself loose from those who had known her in the New England town, who probably had not the faintest idea she was still in the land of the living. No friends—only acquaintances. Like Lance, and Stephanie, Tod Ranger, and perhaps Marjorie Browning, and the rest of that fast-stepping crowd. Certainly they could not be called friends.

With a curious pang of fear that might have been hers, she slit the envelope. A half-strangled cry was forced back from her lips as the words started at her. Then nameless dread plunged through her like a cold dagger.

On a single sheet of paper was written in that same unformed hand: "You cannot escape your fate. You and the man you love."

There was no signature, only a queer scrawl near the bottom of the sheet which she recognized as her own. The Queen's dress will be made of white satin and will be embroidered all over in white and gold. Designs for the embroidery of the dress include Dominion and Colonial emblems.—London Times.

The note was crumpled in her nervous fingers. She stared at him like a stricken animal. Michael held out his hand. Masterful again.

"Starr, let me see that letter."

Her numb lips moved, and in her dark eyes was tragedy. She shook her head.

"I can't, Michael. It isn't anything. I told you that."

The familiar line on Michael's jaw stood out. He spoke steadily.

"There should be no secrets between husband and wife. Let me see that letter."

It had become a matter of vital importance now. Michael was demanding a husband's rights, and Starr knew she must refuse him. She would refuse him, no matter what happened. And he was probably thinking.

Suspicion clouded Michael's face. Starr edged his voice.

Starr did not dare imagine what he was thinking. But she was thinking—remembering. . . . That whispered conversation with Lance, and now came a mysterious letter which she would not explain. Did he think that she and Lance were communicating clandestinely, and only the chance of this letter having arrived at an inopportune time had betrayed the secret?

Dutiful Starr repeated, as she shook her head: "I can't!"

Michael did not ask her again. He simply got up from the table, leaving his breakfast half finished. He stalked out into the entry way and yanked his hat and coat from the hook. Starr heard the outer door bang behind him. It was the first time since their marriage that he had gone out of the apartment without kissing her goodbye.

The distraught figure paced her long living room in a mental torment. She paid no attention to Sapphira's perplexed comments, as if she had not heard her.

What was the meaning of this ominous note? Where had it come from? Who knew? It was like a direct answer to the fear which had been growing upon her slowly since the day her honeymoon ended.

In spite of her busy days, she had had long hours in which to brood, hours when she was alone. Michael, fired with the enthusiasm of providing for their future, had been working under double pressure. She had been thinking about the future, too, defying her inescapable fate, planning, working for a home in which she and Michael should spend long years together. She might have known the futility of that!

Weeks had sped by rapidly. With a dazed feeling Starr now suddenly realized that it was many weeks—weeks that had flown into months—since the doctor had told her: "You won't live another six months."

Suppose the curse did fall upon her as all along she had felt in the depths of her soul that it would? She had defied her destiny. Love—married. Was it to end now—her forbidden happiness?

Royal Robes

Royal School Of Needlework Engaged On Fine Embroidery.

Thirty-five needlewomen have been chosen by Lady Smith-Dorrien, principal of the Royal School of Needlework for the Coronation work which will be carried out at the school during the next three months. They will be engaged mainly on fine embroidery work on the canopy to be held over the King and Queen during the anointment on the King's robe, and probably on the Queen's dress and train.

The King's robe will be that which was made at the school in 1902 for King Edward VII. It will be sent to the school shortly to be thoroughly examined, and repaired if necessary. It is of cloth of gold, embroidered all over with colored emblems—red Tudor roses, green shamrocks, purple thistles and silver eagles.

The canopy will be made entirely at the school, of cloth of gold, with 18 raised silver eagles round the border. It will be lined with rich white satin, and supported at each corner by four slender silver poles. The Queen's dress will be made of white satin and will be embroidered all over in white and gold. Designs for the embroidery of the dress include Dominion and Colonial emblems.—London Times.

New Regulations Effective

Restaurants Placed On Germany's Restaurants Under Nap Plan

Fewer dishes on the bill of fare, fewer table cloths in restaurants, and therefore less laundry, are some of the new measures to help Germany become self-sufficient in her food and raw material supply under the new four-year plan.

This was announced at the hotel and restaurant proprietors' meeting at Hanover recently. The new regulations became effective with the advent of the new year.

No bill of fare, even in the most expensive restaurants, is permitted to offer more than four different soups, 10 "dishes of the day," 10 fried or grilled dishes, six egg dishes, six different kinds of cold and four kinds of warm hors d'oeuvre, or 15 cold dishes such as cold cut, various special salads and cold fish.

Ordinary salads, vegetables, game and poultry may only be offered according to season. No stipulations have been made regarding cheese and dessert. Hot fish is the only major dish not subject to any restrictions, as the consumption of fish is to be encouraged.

Menus of the larger restaurants may offer no more than six major dishes, of which two must be fish, while menus of medium-sized restaurants may offer no more than three dishes, of which one must be fish.

Restaurant tables having marble or wooden tops, which can be cleaned, are not to be covered by table cloths. Saving can be made in laundry. It is said without impairing either cleanliness or hygiene.

Cutlery, crockery and kitchen utensils in new restaurants are to consist of glass, porcelain or metals which are easily obtainable, in order to save silver, nickel and copper.

Industry For Alberta

News that Utah interests are planning a woolen mill for Magrath is further evidence that Southern Alberta is developing industrially in the direction of those industries for which it is best suited, states the Lethbridge Herald. A woolen mill in the centre of a district which produces 2,500,000 pounds of wool annually, and in an area where woolen clothing is a vital necessity of the residents, sounds logical.

A column of air one mile square extending from 50 feet to 14,000 feet above the earth contains, on an average for all seasons, about 25,000,000 insects.

Must Be Competition

Government Order Regulates The Sale Of Militia Horses

The government will tolerate no combinations in restraint of trade, nor secret covenants made to restrict free competition—even in the sale of militia horses. From time to time the noble steeds are found unfit for further service, or, for other reasons, have to be sold. In any case, the national defence department will see that fair's fair.

General order No. 2, tabled in the House of Commons by Ian Mackenzie, minister of national defence, makes this clear. It set forth that when one of these chargers has to be sold the sale has to be done by auction, and the C.O. of the regiment procuring the sale "will detail an officer to attend."

The reason is clear. The G.O. 2 continues that it will be the duty of this officer "to see that no combination exists to keep down the price. If such combination is apparent he will, after consultation with the auctioneer, postpone the sale."

The auctioneer gets a fee of five per cent of the sale price, and five per cent, if over. However, there might not be much in it for the auctioneer because, says the order, he "will pay for all the advertising."

Little Helps For This Week

Remember O Lord Thy tender mercies and Thy loving-kindnesses, for they have ever been of old. Psalm 25:6.

My Father I see and trust. The faithfulness displayed of old, I trust the love that never can grow cold; I trust in Thee.

Be not so much discouraged in the sight of what is yet to be done, as comforted in His good will towards thee. It is true He has chastened thee with rods of sore afflictions, but old He ever take away his loving-kindness from thee, or did His faithfulness ever fail thee in the darkest night, that ever befell thee? We call Him the God of our fathers, and we feel there is some stability at centre when we can tell our cares to One listening at our right hand and by whom their lives have been remembered and removed.

A Century-Old Pipe

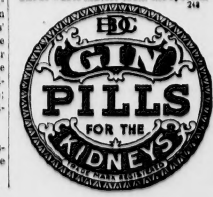

A pipe 125 years old and carved out of three sections of elk's horn, was found hidden in the crotch of the branches of an old tree cut down on a Yarmouth township farm, near Fort Stanley, Ontario. The letters "J. Hall, 1811," are carved on the pipe.

The bankers of New York City were the first employers to go on strike in America. The strike occurred in 1741. In those early days strikers were treated as conspirators but convictions seldom were obtained.

Man that is born of his parents is of a few days and full of microbes. He goeth to school when a youngster
and gets the seat of his pants padded for something he didn't do until he is sick at heart. He groweth up like a weed in a back yard, and soon reaches the age when he is composed largely of feet, freckles and an appetite for pie. He goeth away to college, learneth how to monkey with a three dollar ukule and play poker. He cometh home a bigger fool than ever and marrieth a sweet young thing

whose pa is supposed to be wealthy, but whom he subsequently ascertaineth could not buy a rooster. He worrieth along from year to year gradually acquiring offsprings,
until his house resembles a Sunday school class just before Christmas. He freeth through the day and lieth awake nights trying to figure out how to keep himself and his dependent population out of the poor house. Efforts are rewarded by having his daughters run away and get married and bring him home a nice son-in-law every few days to feast at his board. His sons grow up and call him governor and set him back a five spot every day or so.
About the time he has acquired enough ture to make it worth while for his heirs to quarrel over, he contracts a cold and is hurried away before he has time to have a talk with his family. His sons blow in his estate and his wife puts the finishing touches to his career by marrying the hired man.

We've all heard about the absent-minded professor who poured the syrup down his back and scratched his pancake, but the one who worries us is he who poured the catsup on his shoe and tied his spaghetti.

GLEICHEN UNITED CHURCH

Rev. J. N. Wilkinson, Minister.
Mrs. H. Birch, choir leader.
Miss Jean Farquharson, pianist.
11 a.m. Church School.

7:30 p.m. Evening worship. Subject: "Lazarus' Golden Legend."
The meaning of life is better grasped in a story than any other way. The deepest and most abiding forms of religion—its mystery and passion and love can never be expressed in words but they will hover round a story and through it grip the hearts and minds of men and women. Jesus did most of His teaching in story form and this poet in the "Golden Legend" has shown what the love of Christ in a human heart can do toward changing the life of another. In case some have not caught the main purpose of the poem both old and young are urged to attend Church on Sunday night.

GOT THE IDEA

"You see, Mr. Smidt," said the exponent of Social Credit, "there is plenty of money but we can't get it to use as it should be. Social Credit will pay you dividends instead of actual cash. These dividends will serve the same purpose and keep business at home. This is the third time I have explained this matter to you. I have gone into it thoroughly because I want you to explain this to your fellow-country men. Do you think you understand now?"

"Yes, yes," replied Smidt, "I explain it shut like dis, Mr. Lee."
"Hilda and I haf a little baby. The little baby she cry for milk in de middle ob de night; we get up and ve say to dat little baby, yees, baby, der is plenty milk in der kitchen, but ve cannot give it to you now, but ve will give you someidings shut as good. Here is a milk ticket—now go to slepe."

stry Association. Five itinerant schools, in the form of motor-caravans, and a railway lecture car, have been moving up and down the rural areas during the past twelve months securing audiences which total several hundred thousands. These teaching units do not deal with ordinary school subjects but with the safeguarding of the forests, the streams,
and the wild life; in the prairie provinces the chief subject is the planting of shelter-belts of trees about farm homes so that behind the living wind-break gardens and orchards may be grown.

It is sometimes forgotten that more than eighty per cent of the habitable area of Canada is made by nature for growing forests, for the beauty and utility of lakes and rivers, for the recreational advantages of hunting and fishing. This vast wilderness produces more wealth
than all the gold and silver mines ever discovered in the Dominion, and yet it has been ravaged by human-set fires, it has been denuded of its forests, and the rich possession of wild life have been squandered. To correct such treatment of the public domain,
and establish a new conservation order, the Canadian Forestry Association depends largely upon the education of the people of the rural and small industrial communities and sends its missionaries to hundreds of villages and cross-road places each year. So prompt and practical are the results of such work that today, most forest protection authorities look to popular education as their strongest bulwark against forest devastation. When education is most intensive on the subject of forestry, the forest resources show greatest security. Thus in a field of patriotism that seldom falls within the limelight, the Canadian Forestry Associa-

SERVICES MADE POSSIBLE

Because a Province-Wide
System Serves You!

EVEN the smallest village connected with this province-wide power system has electrical energy available every moment of the day and night.

Surplus water power capacity interconnected with steam plants and a network of power lines, all of which are operated and maintained at a high standard of efficiency,
make electrical energy available instantly
and economically.

The operation of the Company's system requires a skilled technical staff, and in addition, local managers who are located at many points throughout the Province. Facilities are thereby available through which the Company provides consumers of electricity with the best solutions of their electrical problems, and acquaints them with the latest developments in equipment and appliances.
This service enables our customers to obtain from the electricity used the best results at the least cost.
